Join the Fun in My Grandma's Backyard

Prodigious African-American authors Miles and William Rabun share the fun and excitement of one very special summer with their grandmother

Wake Forest, NC – William and Miles Rabun visit their grandmother every summer for fun and family time. The summer of 2006, however, was significantly different from others — it was the time when the precocious youngsters wrote a story about their grandmother's backyard, and turned it into their very first published book. Join them in their adventures as they have fun in My Grandma's Backyard.

This story was inspired by the authors' grandmother's passion for nature and adventure. My Grandma's Backyard explores the many favorite things that William and Miles enjoy doing in their grandmother's backyard — like skipping rocks, identifying plants, and reciting poems, or making up skits. This fun-filled tale reflects the author's real adventures during summers with their grandmother, an environmental specialist for the state of Georgia, and a natural-born lover of the great outdoors. This book also includes a fun activity section for kids to explore and talk about their own adventures. It even has vocabulary words, reading comprehension exercises, and games with an answer key. Although designed towards children, this book will likely appeal to readers of all ages with its masterful mix of aesthetic brilliance, educational subject matter, and pro-environmental theme.

Written from a kid's perspective and featuring the spellbinding illustrations of Atlanta illustrator Tony Moore, — who, in this work, has breathtakingly captured the real likeness of the boys and their favorite summertime playground — My Grandma's Backyard promises to be an exciting treat for young readers all over the world. It is an inspiration for kids to write and publish their early works, and a gleaming testament that young minds are capable of wondrous creations. Audiences will embrace the remarkable achievement of the young African-American authors in achieving something positive and inspirational for others to follow, thus promoting literacy, writing, and comprehension. Get a copy of this amazing book and let your kids join in Miles and William's adventures in My Grandma's Backyard.

About the Authors

Miles Larone Rabun, eight years old, and his brother William Brooks Rabun, six years old, reside in Wake Forest, North Carolina, with their parents. Each summer and on any given holiday they look forward to visiting their grandmother and, of course, her backyard! The boys have been writing stories and poems and attending theatre workshops to further their passion of telling stories in writing, and sharing them on stage and film! This is the first of many more works to come! To learn more, be sure to visit Rabun's official website at www.mygrandmasbackyard.com
